Opening Remarks

Christmas with Sharks

We've been watching a lot of Shark Tank on CNBC lately. At first, we thought they were current episodes, until one of the people on the program starting talking about "this new Facebook thing that just came out."

Which turned out to be a good thing, because Paula can Google (or Dogpile) these would-be entrepreneurs and find out if their big ideas ever amounted to a hill of cash. She's very good at emailing me daily updates on how things panned out for the Season 1 through 3 hopefuls.

Sometimes it's happy news, sometimes it makes me so doggone sad I resort to drinking the cheap hooch.

I never thought I'd like the show. Most of the wealthy businessmen and businesswomen I've ever encountered weren't my kind of people—putting the almighty dollar above all else, spending millions on his and hers matching yachts, drinking some weird stuff called "craft beer." Not that I wouldn't want to be their pals, if they'd ever invite me out for golf or big game hunting or whatever rich people do for fun.

But I sure do like the sharks. They all seem like nice folks, even the bald white guy that sits in the middle and tries to come off like a total butthole. Lori, Mark, Whatshisname and Whatshername are all about maximum return on investment, that's for sure, but I strongly suspect they drop a few coins into the Salvation Army bucket outside Publix at Christmastime, just like us regular people.

That's why the Very Special Christmas Episode of Shark Tank broke my heart. Santa Claus came down all the way from the North Pole to seek $100,000 from the sharks for a two percent stake in the Workshop. He brought along a sexy female elf in leggings—one leg red, the other green, very Christmassy—to help make his case, to no avail.

Beachcomber Editor Chris Manson takes time out from shoveling free food down his throat to rub elbows with our frequent contributing writer Zandra Wolfram and Bill Dunavant at the grand opening of the Henderson resort (and restaurant, and bar, and spa, etc.) in Destin.

This Issue's Contributors

Kay Phelan (Cover). Though her career is marketing and public relations focused, Kay always takes her camera wherever she goes to capture moments for her clients and the media. In fact, she coined the term "PRtography" for her work with the camera.

Zandra Wolfram ("The Henderson's Artful Opening in Destin") is the former editor of Emerald Coast magazine and the brains behind Wordplay, Ink. She snagged Beachcomber an invite to the Henderson's grand opening, for which we're eternally grateful.

Nikki Hedrick (Live Music Review) is currently wondering if the flu turns everyone into zombies. She will be playing assistant to 5 Star Event Photography for their upcoming Portraits with Santa event and looks forward to "talking" with Santa to find out if she can bribe her way off the naughty list.

Kellyanne Bartleson (Family-Friendly Events) is the creator of EmeraldCoastKids.org, a comprehensive online resource guide for all things kids, teens and families in Walton and Okaloosa counties.

Samantha Brigante Lambert ("Cakemasters – Back and Better Than Ever") was a high school history teacher for 35 years. She always wanted to write and finally found the time after she retired. She is enjoying being back in Fort Walton Beach with her husband Scott and sons Drew and Alex.

Joni Williams ("Wanna Know a Secret?") earned her only science fair ribbon in the seventh grade by feeding nothing but beer to a plant. As a teenager she would often try to get on Santa's good list by leaving him cookies and beer instead of milk.

Steven A. Davies ("Share Joy This Christmas") has served as senior/lead pastor at Destin's Village Baptist Church since 1992. He and wife Beverly—who have been married 34 years (!)—have four children and one grandchild. Davies received his Doctor of Ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary in Lithonia, Georgia, and enjoys travel, family, running and missions. "I love to be outdoors," he says.

Paula Hilton ("Christmas in Beachcomberland"), a California hippie at heart, was born to act, sing, write and paint. Currently, she's doing none of these.

Bald guy told Santa, "You are absolutely insane, Mr. Ho-ho-ho. You're sales were zero last year. And the year before that. And the year before that. And—"

Mark Cuban interrupted. "You're telling us your valuation is five million, and you haven't made a profit in hundreds of years. You're giving away toys for free. Tell you what. I will buy you out for 500 thousand dollars. I'll subcontract the manufacturing, keep you on as a consultant for a minimum of 10 years at a salary of 200 thousand a year. Lori, you wanna go in on this deal with me?"

Lori Grandmarnier: "I think you need to be a little more selective about who you distribute these free toys to, Santa. Now I've loved you since I was a little girl, but I honestly cannot see how you've stayed in business all these centuries. I'll partner with Mark, but we're going to have to make some serious changes to how you're running your operation."

Santa thought about it for about half a second and graciously told these titans of the business world...

"I'm out. Merry Christmas, sharks!"

CALLING ALL MUSICIANS
Plans for the ninth Beachcomber Music Awards are underway. We will be accepting qualified nominees for all the categories from this year's event (too many to list, but just search on beachcomberdestin.com). Email your info and all categories you'd like to be considered for to chris@beachcomberdestin.com.

A long nomination ballot with all qualified candidates will appear online later this month, and readers can vote for their top three in each category. And we'll go from there.

Any musicians that would like to play at the event should contact us as well. Awards night scheduled for Monday, March 6, venue to be announced later.

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS
In the last issue of The Beachcomber, we mistakenly reported that—in addition to their locations in Destin, Fort Walton Beach and Grayton Beach—AJ's would be opening additional restaurants in Mossy Head, Laurel Hill and Milton. We apologize profanely for our incompetence.

Grayton Beach

It's crystal clear glass artist Mary Hong's future is brighter than ever. The award-winning artist, who owns two studio art galleries in Grayton Beach, was selected as a special category winner of the [PLATFORM] Artist of the Year 2016. The prestigious international art competition, produced by Redwood Media Group and sponsored by Art Brand Studios, selected Hong at the first place winner for mixed media.

"I am beyond thrilled to have recognition on an international and elite level and excited to bring my mixed-media-with-glass art to the world," says Hong.

Hong entered a grouping of five glass art paintings that ranged from a green wine bottle tree still life to a contemporary abstract of foaming emerald green waves to a whimsical torso sporting a red glass bikini.

The judging panel considered originality, sense of composition, creativity, technical skill, use of materials and light, commercial appeal, and overall impact of the artwork.

Referred to as "the American Idol of the art industry," this premier awards contest is in search of the next "it" artist and is offering prize values of up to $65,000, including a contract with Art Brand Studios and exhibition opportunities at Redwood Media Group's shows.

Last month, Hong was featured at Art San Diego and is invited to exhibit in Spectrum Indian Wells 2017 and Artexpo New York 2017. She also will be included in editorial features in the Spectrum Miami 2016 and Artexpo New York 2017 Art Business News Show catalogues.

"We created the [PLATFORM] Artist of the Year contest to empower talented artists and introduce their work to the world," says Eric Smith, president and CEO of Redwood Media Group. "This is a great opportunity for emerging as well as established artists to submit their work to a panel of professionals with the chance of winning an opportunity of a lifetime."

A professional artist for 23 years, Hong considers herself "a glass artist who paints" and has participated in group and solo exhibitions in the U.S. and France. She opened the Mary Hong Gallery in Grayton Beach in 2012 and in 2015 added the Shard Shop, where she teaches her technique ShardWorx™ artwork made with glass and resin on canvas. She launched a signature line of art supplies and art kits. She also has produced a series of video tutorials viewable at MaryHongArt.com.

Hong is the proud recipient of the 2014 Artist of the Year award from the South Walton Tourist Development Council.

"To me even if glass is broken, it is still beautiful, and I love how a painting can put it all back together," says Hong. "I slather glass with gold and silver leaf, then mix it with other shattered remains of lamps, dinnerware and lately, an old shower door. I like imagining the stories glass could tell."

As a special category winner Mary Hong has been invited to exhibit her artwork through Dec. 4 during Miami Art Week. On Dec. 8, she will be participating in a group exhibit at Bev's Fine Art in Raleigh, North Carolina.

Locally, her work can be seen throughout the Salamander Spa at the Henderson, a new luxury resort hotel that recently opened in Destin. You can purchase her art at the Grayton Beach studio or at MaryHongStudio.com. Call 850-231-1416 for more info.

FRESH SEAFOOD?

One of the first questions people ask when they visit our area is “How can we be sure we’re getting fresh seafood?”

That’s an excellent question. There is a good chance that the seafood you will be offered traveled farther than you did. In the state of Florida, even though we are surrounded by water, more than 90% of the seafood sold this year will be imported from other countries.

Throughout the United States, the huge majority of seafood is imported. Most of it is mislabeled. Frozen seafood is sold as “fresh” and imported seafood is sold as “local.” According to Oceana, 93% of fish sold as red snapper is actually some other species. 57% of tuna sold at sushi bars throughout the country is not tuna. Most of the tilapia served in this country comes from Viet Nam and Thailand and much of it is farmed in waters with sewage run-off and the source of feed is pig feces.

Harbor Docks has been selling fish through its wholesale market since 1981. We sell to markets across the United States and Canada. We also sell to select restaurants along the Gulf Coast. Harbor Docks contracts with over 100 commercial boats to insure that we have an adequate supply of fresh fish.

We invite you to dine at our restaurants – Harbor Docks, in the heart of Destin, and Camille’s, overlooking the Gulf in Crystal Beach. But we’d also encourage you to try any of the wonderful, independent, local restaurants in our area that are committed to serving Florida seafood. We know who they are, because we sell them their fish.

Check our website to find out which restaurants sell certified Gulf-to-Table fish from Harbor Docks Seafood Market.

Trump's Illegal Voters Lie Is Just a Distraction

By Rex Huppke, Tribune Content Agency

President-elect Donald Trump is a narrative arsonist, a firebug who puts tweets to tinder and ignites flaming controversies that lure our eyes from things he doesn't want us to see.

And it seems our presidential pyromaniac has struck again.

On Sunday, the man who will soon lead this country tweeted a lie—a big, fiery one. It read: “In addition to winning the Electoral College in a landslide, I won the popular vote if you deduct the millions of people who voted illegally.”

That statement is based on nothing. Actually, it's based on less than nothing. Its origin is, roughly, this: A nobody Republican with zero credibility or evidence tweeted that 3 million people voted illegally; a conspiracy theory website reported on that tweet, taking it as fact; the president-elect, in need of a distraction, tweeted that information as fact with no citation, not that a citation would have made it any less false.

Let's pause for a moment and consider the staggering level of irresponsibility Trump showed in tweeting that lie. It's akin to: My crazy uncle told me the world is flat; I reported that on my blog; the president of the United States then declared the world flat and banned boats so nobody would sail off the edge of the Earth.

Troublesome, right? Yes, but don't get distracted.

Let's ignore that extremely stupid fire and look at the things Trump the Twitter arsonist was trying to get us to ignore:

1. He won the electoral college (not by a landslide) but lost the popular vote by more than 2 million votes and counting. That's painful for him because he never lets himself believe he has lost anything, and that vote disparity is now being highlighted by state ballot recounts spearheaded, oddly enough, by Green Party candidate Jill Stein.

The man who spent a good part of the presidential campaign claiming the election was rigged is now appalled at the idea of people checking to make sure it wasn't. The takeaway here is this: Ignore Trump's illegal-voter tweet and remind him at every turn that he lost the popular vote and by no means enters office with a mandate.

2. Evidence continues to mount of global business ties that create conflicts of interest for Trump as president. A sweeping New York Times investigation published Sunday found: “Mr. Trump's companies have business operations in at least 20 countries, with a particular focus on the developing world, including outposts in nations like India, Indonesia and Uruguay.”

This web of potential conflicts “could create a running source of controversy for Mr. Trump, as well as tensions between his priorities as president and the needs and objectives of his companies.” Beyond that, Trump's new hotel in Washington, D.C., is already highlighting itself as a destination for foreign diplomats, and Trump's daughter Ivanka, who helps run the Trump Organization, sat in on several recent meetings with Trump and foreign leaders.

There are also reports that the Secret Service may spend several million dollars a year renting space in Trump Tower, taxpayer money that would go straight into Trump's business.

Add it up and you have conflicts and the potential for self-enrichment out the wazoo. So don't look at the tweets, look at the compounding concerns about this president's ability to use the office for cash generation and brand enhancement.

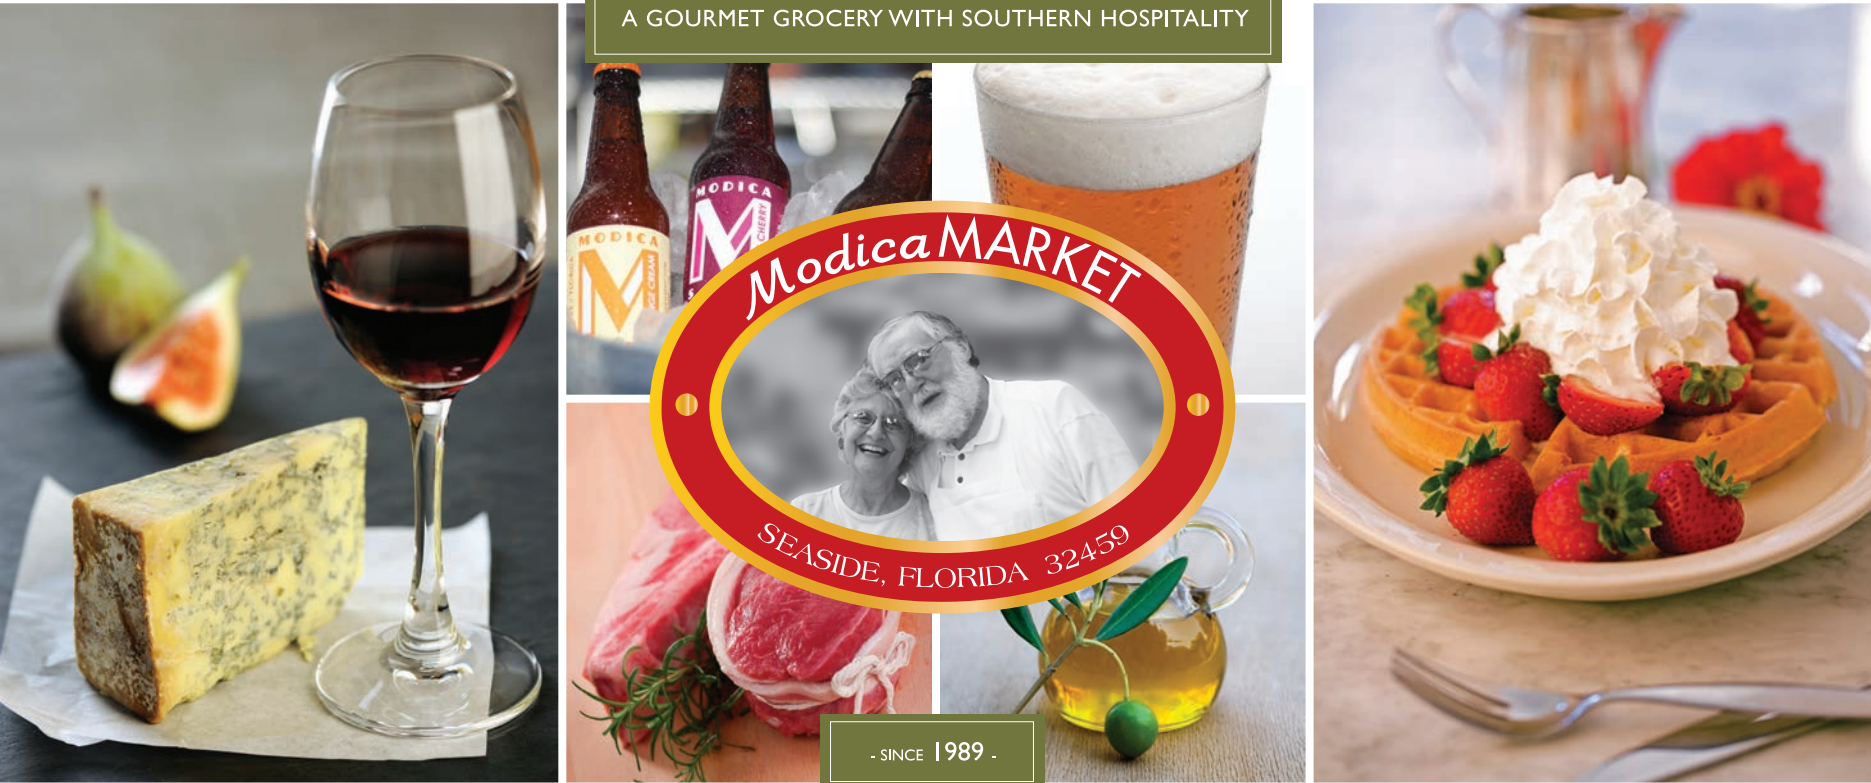

3. As Trump continues to fill out his Cabinet, concerns abound. Aside from picking as his right-hand man a guy who ran a white nationalist website, Trump has chosen an anti-public-education activist whose family has contributed sizably to anti-LGBT organizations as his secretary of education. And he is, according to various reports, torn between choosing Mitt Romney or Rudy Giuliani for secretary of state. That's a bit like choosing between someone who might be a statesman and someone who might have rabies.

The Henderson's Artful Opening in Destin

By Zandra Wolfgram

The Henderson, a Salamander Beach Resort & Spa, opened its doors on November 17 as the finest luxury resort hotel built on the Gulf Coast in a generation.

Every aspect of the five-story 170-room beauty has been meticulously planned, and the art that is displayed throughout the property is no different. After a long and rigorous selection process, 13 local artists were chosen to create pieces specifically for the Henderson.

Each piece has been thoughtfully placed in the hotel to add both beauty and ambiance. The result is a stunning coastal hotel with an inspired sense of place.

Center stage as you enter the Living Room lobby is a stunning handcrafted wooden table by artisan Donnie Galli, who also hand crafted the retail display counter in the gift shop. The lobby also features sunny landscape scenes of beach dunes created by 2016 South Walton Artist of the Year Melody Bogle. Bogle's illuminating pastel landscape pieces will also be displayed on the walls in the bar.

Walking down the corridor of the dedicated meetings wing, guests can take a journey through Destin's past. More than two dozen moment-in-time black and white photos from Tony Mennillo's studio line the walls, providing a peek into Destin's storied past. Large nature-inspired landscape oil paintings by Barbara Flowers, Joanne Walker and Melissa Mercer Brown grace the boardrooms and ballrooms.

When guests visit the Primrose restaurant, they are greeted by a cheery collage of sunny, luscious acrylic painting by Justin Gaffrey. And inside the restaurant are still more large works of beautiful primrose flowers scaling the walls. Gaffrey's iconic work akin to rich, frosted layers on a delicious cake will also be present in the private dining room for guests to admire.

With his bright and playful style, John Maher's artwork is perfectly placed near Poppy's, the children's recreation area, and the fitness center. No doubt, the spa is a desired destination for relaxation and peace so it was important to place pieces here that contribute to a calming environment.

Sparkling, iridescent sea-inspired glass mosaic pieces created by master glass painter Mary Hong will transport guests to the cooling Emerald waters, while the vibrant and bold large-paneled pieces by Veila Lala, placed on curved walls, will illuminate the way to the end of the hall.

Photography by Jeff Waldorff.

Stunning images of local landscapes, flora and fauna captured by nature photographer Jeff Waldorff are displayed in the spa as well as within each guest bathroom throughout the hotel.

Standing center stage in the heart of the spa is a stunning six-foot tall glass sculpture of a coastal wave hand blown by glass artist Russ Gilbert of Fusion Glass Art. Guests will also discover

Gilbert's nature-inspired blown glass pieces shaped into fragile frays of sea oats and mounted majestically behind the front desk, as well as schools of blue fish swimming along the wall in the main dining room.

These custom pieces crafted by the creative hands of some of the Emerald Coast's most talented artists will bring beauty and inspiration for many years to come. With beautiful artwork gracing the walls, the Henderson has further defined its unique sense of place as a warm and welcoming home away from home.

The Beat Profiles* — Dino Lourdi

HOME: Santa Rosa Beach. Originally from Bali Island, Indonesia.

AGE: I am a demigod, so immortality is for my kind...LOL, prefer not to say.

PROFESSION: Guitarist, singer and songwriter.

HOBBIES: Playing guitar. Nature. Nature heals my soul. As islanders, we are raised to respect our earth, and I kind of consider myself a tree hugger. I do respect trees and love them, especially old ones. Whenever I see one that looks like it has aged, I normally just run up and hug it. There's so many stories trees can tell through the time that earth has evolved. I get a little sad when I see old trees just get chopped down for nothing.

I love playing with dogs, rollerblading along the beach, exercising, cooking. I can cook pretty impressive meals—I can confidently say that. I cooked ratatouille just like in the movie, and had my besties try it at Enlightened Studios. I read books, watch movies, and love writing movie scripts. I have a few projects that I've started—hopefully, I can finish them one day.

LAST BOOK I READ: The Power of Now by Eckhart Tolle. It changes your life perspective as a human being in pursuit of happiness within.

RECENT ACCOMPLISHMENTS: Being able to use the talent God blessed me with to not only bring me income, but to bring joy to me and others. And mostly to worship Him at the church.

QUOTE: "Darkness cannot drive out darkness, only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate, only love can do that." — Martin Luther King Jr.

PROFILE: I'm still new in this music scene. I came to the USA 13 years ago not knowing anyone, and now I'm able to play music and entertain for a living—that's a wild dream I never thought would come true. I am very blessed for this musical journey. God has always been kind to me throughout the times I've been dealing with deep depression, losing almost everything and nearly being homeless.

I only had 10 dollars in my bank account three years ago, but one day I decided to go check out Destiny Worship Center with the encouragement of my good friend Kalen Carter. Since that day, my life has been turned around from where I thought I was never going to get better. God, through my DWC family, helped me get back on track and rebuild myself.

Music has always been a part of my life. I grew up kind of spoiled, so in order to discipline me, my parents put me in after school extracurricular music programs taught by Catholic priests and sisters. It was really strict. That's how I encountered the guitar at age 15. In high school, I was into the progressive metal band Dream Theater—shredding and odd notes, I found it really interesting. Later, I started looking into neoclassical rock, then a variety of jazz and fusion jazz.

I met Nick Turner at an open mic at the Funky Blues Shack Baytowne, and Scott Rockwood, the guitar sensei, was hosting it. A good friend invited me—at the time, I had no idea what an open mic was. I attempted to play the Beatles' "With a Little Help from My Friends" and failed terribly. As I came off the stage, Nick invited me to the next open mic, and then I was showing up all over the area. I started channeling my long forgotten musical talent with the help of kindhearted people God sent to me—DWC, Nick, 30A Songwriter Radio's Josette Rhodes and Shannon Ireland, Cole Huffer, Shane DeFurry, Arron Stevens...

Once I thought I'd be lonely in this foreign country, but now I have a big family. I've met so many lovely people throughout this journey. Music does bring people together. It's powerful.

I incorporate smooth jazz, blues, Motown, pop, rock, reggae and a bit country. I love all kinds of music. A little of everything for everyone. I play both acoustic and electric guitar and sing. I'm putting together a band project, too—I think it's time for this grasshopper to fly, so stay tuned.

Accursed Creator

Sins of the Father

Independent

Pensacola's dynamic Accursed Creator are disciples of fusing multiple genres of metal. They build on the backs of death, progressive and melodic metal pioneers to create intricate and raucous music. With a frontwoman who can growl and snarl death metal lyrics as well (if not better) than many of her male counterparts, well... here's to Accursed Creator continuing their conquests.

- Nikki Hedrick

Kurt Elling

The Beautiful Day – Kurt Elling Sings Christmas

Okeh

Jazz vocalist Elling follows in the footsteps of Sinatra, Crosby, Nat King Cole, Johnny Mathis and other iconic male singers with That Beautiful Day, a 14-track Christmas album. It's a first for the prolific Elling, who has been putting his stamp on the tricky scat/vocalese genre since the 1990s. The song list includes sacred, secular and show tunes, including several from Leslie Bricusse's spot-on score to the 1970 film Scrooge. The arrangements vary from near-traditional to near-complete makeovers—e.g., the lyrics to "Little Drummer Boy" undergo a '50s-vintage jive translation. This should liven up your tree trimming.

- Bruce Collier

Jennifer Knapp

Set Me Free

Righteous Babe Records

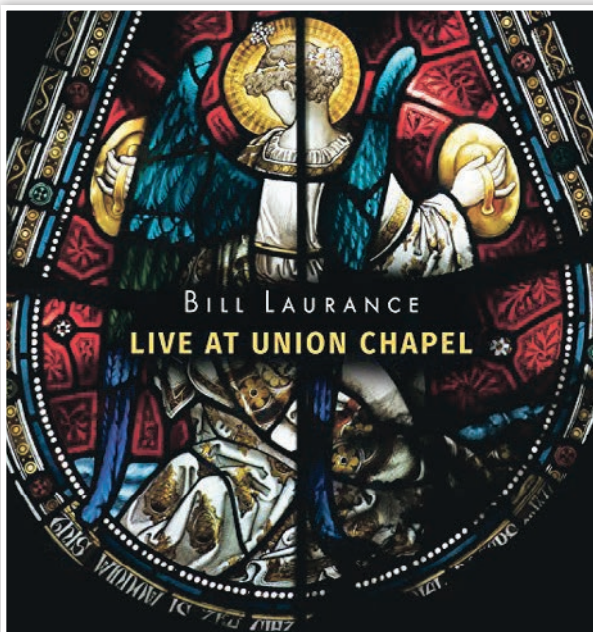

Heartfelt songbird Knapp returns for 2017's 30A Songwriter Festival in January. Every songwriter approaches his or her craft differently, but as a listener, you come away from Set Me Free with an idea of Knapp's nature, as if listening to her offers a doorway into knowing her. This album features 11 soulful songs about love and the journey towards it.

- Nikki Hedrick

Bill Laurance

Live at Union Chapel

Emarcy

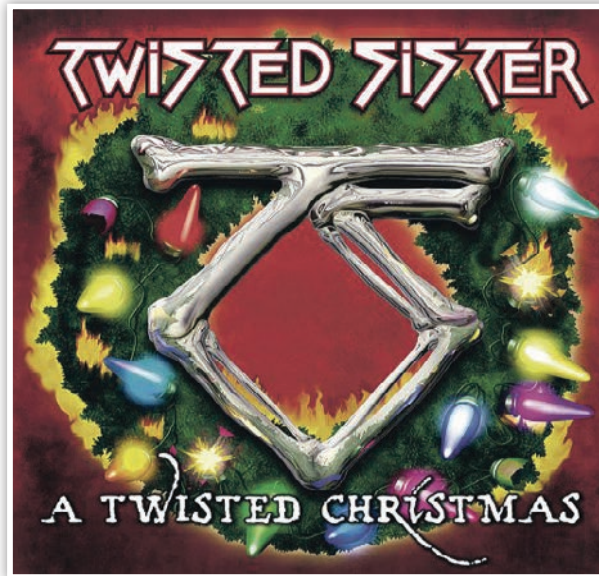

Pianist and Snarky Puppy co-founder Laurance's Live at Union Chapel is his fourth solo endeavor in three years, so we are not listening to a lazy musician. A few of his Snarky Puppy cohorts sit in with him here at the legendary London venue. Yes it's jazz, yes it's classical, yes it's got strings and French horn along with the Moog. It might make you think of Emerson, Lake & Palmer or Rick Wakeman. Laurance starts strong, achieving a momentum that becomes panoramic. The quality is so polished that, but for the occasional applause, you'd not know it was live.

- Bruce Collier

Twisted Sister

Twisted Christmas

Razor & Tie

I'm a bit of a Scrooge, and if you are, too, and would like to ruffle a few feathers at your next family gathering, this is the seasonal music to play. Twisted Sister went after the songs earnestly enough that you might can shrug it off as a change of pace from the same ol' versions that have been endlessly piped into our subconscious thanks to advertising and Muzak. And, let's be honest, there aren't enough electric guitars in Christmas songs.

- Nikki Hedrick

Volbeat

Seal the Deal & Let's Boogie

Republic Records

Volbeat's latest seals the deal, proving the band's staying power by delivering more of their unique, punk-metal sound, with the title track and "The Devil's Bleeding Crown" already familiar tunes. Listen carefully to the entire album, though, and you'll hear some ballad-like lyrics wrapped up in signature rapid fire drumbeat and screeching metal strings. "The Bliss" and "You Will Know" are downright wedding song worthy—that is, if the bride and groom want a rockin' ceremony worthy of a GNR video, because nothing on this album is a slow dance. It all rocks, or at least boogies. And it's all good.

- Joni Williams

Tom Petty Tribute Concert

Seaside Repertory Theatre

Who knew we all knew so many Tom Petty songs?

The annual fundraiser concert at the REP Theatre is not just any concert—it is an outpouring of many of the top local musicians donating their talents to honor the music we all love. Past artists honored include Bob Dylan, the Beatles, Johnny Cash and the Rolling Stones. This time Petty received the royal 30A treatment.

Whether it was the Steenos digging through the crates to perform Mudcrutch songs or Mike Whitty making a Petty classic all his own, the annual event always packs the house.

This year, the event went off script, deviating from the Petty songbook for the late Leonard Cohen's "Hallelujah" and a moving tribute to Kenny Oliverio that brought all of the evening's performers together. The group closed out the night by performing the Kenny O original "Ain't Gonna Worry."

Hearing that song done with such tender care...I wouldn't trade that moment for the world.

- Nikki Hedrick

Whaddaya Want?!? Our Holiday Wish Lists

BRUCE COLLIER

Beachcomber Contributing Editor

This Christmas, instead of fake news and reality television, can we have the reverse? If we can't tell the difference, we can always go back to normal.

I'd like an Indian restaurant to magically appear in the Destin-Fort Walton Beach area and never go away. I'm willing to part with any number of souvenir shops to make that happen.

I'd like a craft distiller to offer me a part-time job. Apprentice Taster, maybe.

GRACE COLLIER

a/k/a the Tiny Diner

Grace is deciding whether Shopkins are as prudent a long-term investment as American Girl dolls and accessories. She also wants a "one-of-a-kind, made-to-order Barbie Dream House." She asked about life-sized Barbie dolls, but Bruce intends to tell her that those are specialty items that Santa farms out to subcontractors. With any luck, he won't have that conversation except in his head.

SAMANTHA LAMBERT

Beachcomber Contributing Writer

1. Continued peace, love and happiness for my family.
2. To win the Florida Lottery.
3. To start writing the novel that I have always wanted to write in 2017.

ZANDRA WOLFGRAM

Beachcomber Contributing Writer (Among Other Things)

Can Santa put time in a bottle? I'd like a little more of that, please. Any denomination is fine—days, weeks, months, years, just maybe not minutes. Then again, a really good moment can be life changing, so yeah, I'll take whatever.

Nathanael and Anna Fisher of the Emerald Coast Theatre Company with superstar volunteer Candace Joslin at the Grand Boulevard Festival of Trees.

TUNY JENNINGS

Arts and Design Society, Fort Walton Beach

Number one on my list—a realization in our community of what a treasure we have in our ADSO Art Center with its classes, exhibitions, and other activities. Despite great publicity, it seems to be FWB's best kept secret ever.

Number two—an online course for my cats to teach them to tidy and change their own litter box. They're old enough to take on that responsibility.

LESLIE KOLOVICH

30A Mover/Shaker, Occasional Beachcomber Contributor

My Christmas wish came true in October, unbeknownst to me. I needed some comfort and joy that seemed to have been stolen from me—even the Grinch only tried to steal one day from the Whoville people!

My Christmas wish is that we can come together in love, compassion and peace, and in the end share some roast beast and Who-pudding, hold hands and sing around the Christmas tree.

And to all the merchandisers and stores who started Christmas before Halloween—thank you from the bottom of my heart. Fah who-for-aze! Welcome Christmas! Welcome Christmas, come this way!

TIM MORINELLI

Musician-Vodka Enthusiast-Packers Fan

I wrote to Santa and requested the following items—new slippers (my dog Brandy ate them), new edible underwear (my wife Rusty ate them), a large salami hoagie (my friend Matty ate mine), and peace and harmony in America (the presidential election ate that all up).

NIKKI HEDRICK

The Fat Man Is Tapped Out

By S. Claus

Hanging out along the Emerald Coast

sure as heck beats freezing your butt off at the North Pole. I don't care how long you live in a place, you never, never get used to those ice-cold sheets rubbing up against your tender skin after you've crawled into bed with Mrs. Claus.

I've decided to spend the holidays here in your lovely neck of the woods and leave all the Christmas work to my trusted elves. I doubt they'll complain. With today's economy, they're lucky they still have jobs.

But I'm no slacker, believe me. Between Destin Commons, Uptown Station, Seaside, Pier Park, Silver Sands, the malls and all the other places, Santa has been working hard to make this a Very Special Christmas to Remember.

The bad news is, like a lot of other businesses, Santa Claus, Inc. has been forced to cut costs. Gone is my state-of-the-art surveillance system, so you kids can breathe a little easier. This year, I have no idea if you're being good or bad, if you're sleeping or awake.

And while the price of fuel has gone down, the cost of reindeer food has reached staggering highs. If I don't make it down your chimney this Christmas, it's not because you're not good little boys and girls. It's because the Fat Man is tapped out.

I plan to appear before Congress after New Year's, along with the Easter Bunny and the Tooth Fairy—we like to call ourselves "The Big Three"—to request a much-needed $300 billion bailout. If there was another way, I'd certainly consider it. So in the spirit of Good Will Towards Men, please wish us luck. And while you're at it, drop your representatives and senator an email.

Santa's bag may be empty this Christmas, but my heart is full of love for all of you who believed in me and sent me all those letters (and emails and text messages) over the years.

And, to the kids who didn't scream in my ears or spit up on me, I'm eternally grateful.

To the wonderful people of Destin, Fort Walton Beach, South Walton, Niceville, Navarre, Panama City, Mossy Head, etc., thank you for welcoming me with open arms.

And don't call me a Snowbird.

Chris Leavenworth, Destin Harvest

Interviewed by Charles Morgan III

Destin Harvest is a food rescue program that has distributed more than five million pounds of food to local feeding programs since 2007. It was founded by George Landegger, a part-time resident of our area.

Destin Harvest has four refrigerated box trucks and picks up high volume food donations from retail grocers and restaurants in Destin, Fort Walton Beach and Santa Rosa Beach. The foods are harvested daily and distributed at no charge to nearly 40 feeding programs. None of the food is warehoused. Distributing the food daily significantly reduces the time perishable items reach clients.

Chris Leavenworth is the director of Destin Harvest.

How did you get started with Destin Harvest?

Destin Harvest started out with a small refrigerated truck, one full-time driver, a part-time driver (me) and a director (Kim Moore). I was hired as a part-time driver in 2008 when I was working as a stock manager at Williams Sonoma. I was also attending school. I was 22 years old.

You were young. What have you learned?

I wasn't exceptionally aware of my surroundings or the needs of others at that point in my life. It was a job that I worked on the weekend, and it provided a supplemental income. I was naive, had preconceptions about the way things are, and in an excellent position to learn. Driving the truck opened my eyes to some unpleasant truths and made me think about the ones we serve.

Without having given much thought before, I questioned the purpose of helping people who I quickly assumed were lazy or made bad life decisions. I believe people are sometimes drawn to simple answers when they are uncomfortable about knowing the truth. I know I was.

What is it like out there when you deliver the food?

Within the first few months, I was presented with a healthy dose of cognitive dissonance. My predispositions about people in need couldn't reconcile with what I was seeing. It was not long before I made friends with some of the families and individuals that I would see on our stops. Not only were these people not lazy or incompetent, I quickly realized how easily I could relate to them.

I've witnessed the homeless make themselves useful wherever they are. At feeding programs, they are generally the last to receive and the first to help bring food in and sort it out with the volunteers. I also learned that many of the chronically hungry don't have a long history of receiving assistance. Same goes for the homeless. Something happens to a person, or a household, that puts them in a position to seek out assistance. Nobody ever wants that. I kept thinking of how easily something like that could happen to me.

When did you commit to Destin Harvest full-time?

After six months of driving part-time, I was offered a full-time position as a coordinator. Michael Walsh had taken over as our new director. We began picking up foods from local grocers, increasing our volume exponentially. My job was to reach out to new feeding programs, add them to our route, monitor truck maintenance and food numbers, and drive a truck five days a week. We were delivering food to Crestview, Fort Walton Beach and Navarre and had over 20 recipient feeding programs.

Once we got the route and increased food volume nailed down, I built our first website. I realized that I was doing something I really loved and wanted to make myself as useful as possible to the company. I had worked retail and restaurants my whole life, and I can't say I was ever too passionate about it. I had become so close to many of the volunteers and staff at the feeding programs I delivered to that I realized this was a great opportunity for me.

Willie Hutchins, who has been with us from the beginning, used to give me a hard time when I started. But he really wound up being a mentor to me. There were at least two days every week that we drove together and we talked a lot about the job and life. He was one of the first people to show me how little I know. He also taught me how to drive those 20-foot trucks. I'd say that he is a big part of how I developed as a person and how I approach this work.

What are the challenges for Destin Harvest?

The biggest challenge is getting people to understand that hunger is a real thing. I don't know what it is, but local hunger is not something most people get too worked up about. Hunger relief is recognized primarily in the fall—September is Hunger Month.

We need more local supporters. The operation cannot continue to grow until we can sustain the operation with local funds. We are able to acquire food much cheaper than what it costs for someone to purchase canned items. Plus, we are able to get perishable items that tend to be more nutritious than items food banks and pantries generally get from canned food drives. One pound of food only costs Destin Harvest 13 cents a pound.

What's a normal day like for Chris Leavenworth?

It can be anything from jumping on a truck and helping out on the route, meeting with a new feeding program, checking in on existing feeding programs, getting trucks repaired, maintenance, bookkeeping, and anything else that needs to be done. I also apply for grants when there is an opportunity.

You've got a family?

I met my wife Anya when she was working at Bed, Bath and Beyond, right before I started at Williams Sonoma. I was a mess. I lived in Choctaw Beach with a friend, and we played a lot of music and didn't always pay our bills. I met her in the winter, and we didn't have electricity at my place. I have no idea what she saw in me, but she cleaned me up pretty good. My Pop, Mike, told me that Christmas that I had better not let her go. We got married that spring. James, our son, is seven years old. Anya and I have been married almost 10 years now.

You like your job?

The work has been truly rewarding. I couldn't ask for a better job. I actually am scared of ever having to settle for less if anything ever happened to Destin Harvest. This job has taught me so much about people and circumstances. I've made so many wonderful friends from all the different programs we deliver to and the businesses we work with. I don't think I could have found these people any other way.

I'm also fortunate to have time for my own life and family. Not many people have that. I'm extremely lucky.

“A Christmas Carol” in Concert at NWF State College

Charles Dickens’ immortal classic A Christmas Carol takes a delightful twist Dec. 1-3 in a customized adaption by Northwest Florida State College that combines vibrant song and dance along with drama, period costumes and narration to portray the story of Ebenezer Scrooge, Tiny Tim, Bob Cratchit and the spirits of Christmas.

Included in the $25 ticket price are Victorian style desserts and beverages. New menu selections and new music enhance this year’s offering of the popular holiday event, which has expanded to offer four performances in the Sprint Theater of the college’s Mattie Kelly Arts Center.

A Christmas Carol: In Concert performances are at 7:30 p.m. Dec.

1 and 2, and at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Dec. 3. Contact the Box Office at 850-729-6000 or purchase online at MattieKellyArtsCenter.org. Early purchase is strongly recommended, as the event has sold out the past several years.

More than 50 talented NWF State College vocalists, dancers and theater students appear in the production. Through select scenes taken from Dickens’ novella, the timeless tale of forgiveness and redemption unfolds in its entirety through song, dance and narration.

The cast includes Michael Brooks of Crestview as the adult Ebenezer Scrooge; Madison Anderson of Crestview, who appears throughout the production as the show’s narrator; Drew Hardy of Fort Walton Beach as Bob Cratchit, the long-suffering accountant at Scrooge’s business; and Emmalee Ferguson of Niceville as Tiny Tim. The young Ebenezer is played by Ken Jakob Angell of Niceville.

The famous ghosts of A Christmas Carol are portrayed by Joshua Birdsong of Destin, Alayshia Green of Fort Walton Beach, and Malinda Locke of Niceville. Alexis Guessford of Santa Rosa Beach plays Mrs. Cratchit, and the Cratchit children are played by Madison Smith of Niceville, Dakota Welborn of Fort Walton Beach, and Abigayle Ferguson of Niceville.

NWF State College faculty and staff direct the show, including director and choreographer Joseph Taylor, assistant director Anthony Borella, music director Allison Everitt, and Belle Voci director and pianist Lois Henry.

The menu for the event (served at intermission) includes baked brie and dried cherry tartlets, pomegranate and vanilla crème tartlets, hazelnut and fig tartlets, triple chocolate and orange mini cupcakes, gingerbread brownies, eggnog fudge, peppermint meringues, cranberry scones, pistachio goat cheese log, red velvet cake truffles, cranberry lime spritzer punch, gingerbread hot chocolate, regular coffee with assorted creamers, sweet and unsweet tea, and water.

The late Joy Santlofer did not live to see this book finished, a task that was fulfilled by family and friends. This is more than a shallow piece on Big Apple noshing. It starts with Dutch settlers sitting in their huts pining for Old Country victuals, and ends in the present day. Santlofer chronicles bread, beer, crackers, butchers, distillers, sugar, coffee, labor unions, sanitation, and the clash of artisanal and mass-produced food. There's social and economic history, but somehow it's never dull. A good portion of the book is devoted to notes, and there are plenty of maps and illustrations.

Upstairs or Downstairs Snacking and Dining, Grayton Beach Style

My family and I ate at Chiringo on a recent weekend, when the weather was beginning to suggest autumn. The restaurant is in Grayton Beach, just on the other side of the dunes. It occupies a street corner wooden structure, and has two stories.

The ground floor is divided into an open-front counter tapas bar and the main bar, which has elevated tables and seating. Upstairs is a more conventional dining room, with two- and four-tops, plus a little dining alcove. The furnishing is casual and beachy, with wood, glass and metal, painted and unpainted. The upstairs dining room is well ventilated, and the staff can adjust windows and shutters to temper any unfriendly weather.

The menu is the same all day, and it's possible to snack or chow down as the spirit moves you. There are appetizers, a salad, sandwiches, rice bowls, fried baskets, a "chill bar," and a kids menu. Our server Bobbie took drink orders and left us to make up our minds.

We were all hungry, so we decided to give the menu a good run. My five-year-old daughter Grace (the Tiny Diner) found the dining room somehow very stimulating, and had trouble staying seated. Fortunately the place is casual, and nobody minded the two of us straying onto the porch to get a view of the Grayton scene. A strawberry lemonade lured her (and me) back to the table, where my wife had already made up her mind.

We started off with grouper frituras, two-bite chunks of fried grouper with aioli and tomato-cucumber salsa. TD isn't much on apps, but she helped out this time. The tender and succulent fish was lightly breaded with rice flour, giving it an extra crunch.

Other starters were albondigas, ground beef meatballs in a tomato rioja sauce, topped with shredded Manchego and green onion; and shrimp crujidos, sourdough toast topped with roasted red pepper hummus, blackened shrimp salad and mixed olive tapanede. The chill bar offers oysters on the half shell by the dozen or the half-dozen, roasted mahi escabeche with caperberries, pickled vegetables and lavash, and shrimp cocktail with a side of pineapple salsa. They all sounded great.

For the main course, TD chose a children's meal of rice flour-fried shrimp with a fruit cup. My wife ordered a roasted pork butt sandwich with aioli, pineapple salsa, cilantro, arugula and tomato on toasted brioche bun. I ordered the Chiringo burger, two four-ounce patties with white cheddar, pepper jack, arugula, tomatoes, caramelized onions and a house-made "awesome sauce," also on toasted brioche. Both of our main courses came with fries.

We had arrived early, but by the time the apps had come the place was filling up, with three families (one celebrating a birthday) and a number of kids. TD stared intently at them, a sure sign that she wanted to go over and introduce herself, but she's a leisurely enough diner as it is. She ate half her meal (with our consent Bobby had brought TD's food out right away) and was about to wiggle away when our food arrived. Bobbie may have been monitoring the situation.

It's a good thing we were hungry. Both sandwiches were extra large—mine had height as well as breadth. The brioche buns were plump and buttery. The fries—shoestring style—were piled in a small haystack. I immediately cut my burger in two. There was no way I was going to finish it all at lunch. The twin patties were juicy and flavorful. The toppings—sweet onions, tangy cheese and just the right amount of the sauce (a blend of ketchup, worcestershire, spices, et. al.)—held it all together. Half was plenty. The fries just had to be finished.

My wife's piled-up pork was melty and savory, and the pineapple salsa (with hot pepper) cut deftly through the richness. She finished her sandwich but took most of the fries home.

Other main course options are Chiringo mixed green salad (available with various proteins), grouper sandwich, rice bowls with roasted mojo pork, grouper, chicken or vegetables, and fried shrimp or chicken baskets.

Chiringo offers one dessert—Li'l Chubbys, vanilla ice cream sandwiches made with thick chocolate chip cookies.

We asked for a single order, which turned out to be two sandwiches sitting on a mound of chocolate ganache. They're a tricky cross between finger- and spoon-food. Very tasty, but I'd suggest you bring someone along to share. Like the name says, they're Li'l, but Chubby.

Cakemasters – Back and Better Than Ever

By Samantha Lambert

The first sense that is awakened upon walking in Cakemasters Bakery in Fort Walton Beach is your sense of smell. The sweet smells of cakes, cookies, and pies hits you first. Then your sense of sight is enticed by the array of cookies, pastries and breads arranged in the glass cases. Wonderful memories start to come alive in your mind of Sunday morning breakfasts of crumb cake and Danish.

Bob Schomburg and his wife Elizabeth opened Cakemasters on Beal Parkway in Fort Walton Beach in March 1971. “We were living in Mobile at that time and Dad would come over here on weekends to fish,” says Bob and Elizabeth’s daughter Lisa. “He loved fishing and the Gulf. The building that housed the bakery was found by a fine lady named Louise Stone.”

Lisa says her parents acquired only half of the building at that time and that when they opened the bakery on Beal, her mother found an old Coca-Cola sign and painted Cakemasters Bakery on it.

“Everything was woods in that area back then. Our first customers were a child and his mother walking through the neighborhood. The child told his mother he smelled a bakery, and they came in and became regular customers.”

Bob, who passed away in February at age 81, was a third generation master baker by the age of 21. Bob’s father and grandfather were both born in Germany and trained in baking. Bob’s father came to America in the early 1900s and settled in Philadelphia, where he ran a bakery for 30 years.

When Bob was eight years old and working in his father’s bakery, he started studying the old world traditional style of baking. After finishing his apprenticeship, Bob worked at different ethnic bakeries. He learned baking styles from different cultures such as German, Italian, Polish, French, Cuban, Jewish and Spanish.

Lisa started working in the Philadelphia bakery when she was six. At age 10, she was doing the cleaning in the bakery, and at 14 was working for a paycheck. She graduated from Choctawhatchee High School in 1978. In 1999, she left a successful business career with an international gingerbread manufacturer to return to the family business.

Just three of Cakemasters’ satisfied customers—Fort Walton Beach resident Linda Mubarak and kids Tariq and Fida.

Lisa also became a master baker and worked side by side with her father making wonderful baked goods until his death. “He loved baking, his customers, and he loved having his picture taken,” says Lisa. Elizabeth Schomburg passed away in 1999.

In May of this year, Lisa had to vacate the building in which Cakemasters Bakery had been located for 45 years. Bob Hope Village offered its kitchen so Lisa could fulfill wedding cake orders. Other longtime customers stepped up to help her in any way they could.

Today, Cakemasters Bakery is back and better than ever. The new address is 105 Beach Drive, near the intersection of Eglin Parkway and Racetrack Road behind the Pizza Hut building.

“Growing up in Fort Walton Beach, our family always went to Cakemasters for our bakery items,” says local Marie Slade. “As an adult, I chose to make Cakemasters my go-to bakery. From birthdays, graduations, and my parents’ 50th anniversary, Cakemasters made the cake. I was elated to hear that Cakemasters had opened in a new location.”

Linda Mubarak and her children, Tariq and Fida, stopped in on the day Lisa was being interviewed for this story. “I love this bakery!” says Mubarak. “I come here for butter and cream cakes and cinnamon rolls which are so delicious.”

Lisa says the custom-made cakes are the mainstay of the bakery. There are dozens of different cake flavors with almost any flavor of filling and icing that you want. “At Christmas, we sell tons of cookies. The ragulah cookies are very popular.”

She adds that her personal holiday favorite is the Christmas Stollen, a mixed-fruit sweetbread. “I have it every Christmas morning with my coffee and sit by the tree,” says Lisa. She recommends that customers order early for their holiday goodies.

For me, Cakemasters brought back sweet memories of growing up in Fort Walton Beach in the 1970s. Some things never change.

Wanna Know a Secret?

By Joni Williams

If Navarre is Florida's best kept secret, then Ye Olde Brothers Brewery is Navarre's. It shouldn't be. This place serves up some of the best in-house beer we've ever sampled in Florida. No joke.

Tucked away in a standalone set of buildings off Highway 87, about 10 minutes north of the Navarre Beach sign and its infamous quote, this family-owned brewpub is a little off the beaten path. So when we walked in around two-ish on a recent Saturday—usually a slow time for pubs—we expected to see a lot of empty chairs. Instead, the bar was packed to capacity and the many dining tables, nearly so.

It didn't take long to find out why. For starters, they have a cozy selection of interesting wine—DeLuna Pomegranate, anyone?—alongside some of the best names in craft and German beer, bottled and on tap. Prices start at around $4.50 unless you hit Happy Hour from 3 to 6 p.m., when you'll save a buck a beer.

Even so, it's the house brews, made onsite, that really steal the show. Soon to be rotated seasonals included a well-balanced Pumpkin ale along with one of our personal faves, a buzz worthy Double IPA. Hello, 10 percent ABV! And the brewer promises a just-as-tempting chocolate stout is coming soon.

We stuck to the basics with a flight of their staid, year round varieties—an IPA, wheat, stout and porter. And honestly, we expected to be at least a little disappointed with one or two. Navarre isn't exactly known for its fine beer. Beaches, yes. Beer, no.

But it is now. Or should be, as these beers were all excellent in flavor, carbonation and presentation, served up in customized glassware set on a traditional wood block. The Blackwater Stout was deliciously earthy and dark, almost coffee-ish, and like Guinness, nitro-carbonated. Only a million times tastier. But then, we've never met a stout we didn't like.

What almost knocked us off our bar stool, though, was the Panhandle Porter. A lot of porters we try are just too syrupy or musky to strike our fancy. But as the ever-wise Goldilocks once said, the PP was just right. Perfect, even. Malty and naturally sweet, balanced and super smooth, it may be the best locally brewed porter we've ever tried. And we've tried a few.

Likewise, the dry hopped East Bay IPA was spot-on flavor wise, with hints of citrus and spice and a finish of oh-so-gentle bitters that nibble instead of bite the tongue. Regardless of its too-high-to-qualify seven percent ABV, this could break the rules and be a session IPA based on its smooth, excellent taste and drinkability.

With three winners under our getting-tighter-by-the-second belts, you'd think we'd have found at least one brew to nitpick. But no... The Black Bear Honey Wheat was also golden perfection—smooth, slightly sweet and subtly hoppy.

There was one negative to our visit. We went after lunch and before a planned dinner elsewhere. Big mistake. If you go, go hungry. The food, we hear, is as good as the brews, especially the smoked onsite meats and wood-fired pizzas cooked to perfection in high tech, monitored ovens.

Nothing here is pricey, either. A large pizza with the works costs $14.99 and a cheese pie $7.99. And good luck resisting their crack desserts. Bourbon soaked pecan pie, New York cheesecake and triple chocolate cake, where have you been all my life? Right here in Navarre, obviously. Who knew?

With a staff that's beyond friendly, it's easy to see why the locals flock to this place. And if you're a carpetbagger, no worries. If you go, they'll welcome you like one of their own. And you should go.

Fritzapalooza

On Sunday, November 13, a bunch of good folks came together for the Friends for Fritz fundraiser at Harry T's in HarborWalk Village in support of Fritz Wayner, who is battling Stage 4 Pancreatic Cancer. Fritz is perhaps best known to Beachcomber readers as the friendly fellow behind the bar at the Swizzle Stick Lounge on Okaloosa Island.

Event co-organizer Tim Morinelli tells us the evening raised over $14,000. "It made me tear up," says Morinelli. "It just shows how genuinely helpful people in this town can be and how truly incredible Fritz is as a man."

Morinelli's band Flash Flood kicked off the event's entertainment, followed by a Bo Adams-Brandon Day collaboration that Diki Ross dubbed "Bo-Day-Scious." Beachcomber Music Award winner Hope Given also performed, along with RoshamBeatles, the Fab Four tribute band featuring members of Roshambo along with Ross and Chris Hayes. Flash Flood's Rusty Morinelli kept things moving as MC.

"It was the people that put it together that were absolutely the grease that drove this cart," says Tim. "Dan Empson, Paula Mitchell, Bonita Destin, Dawn Ledford and Russ Jackson, Michelle Fiona, Susan Chang, Matt Leon, and the whole Harry T's crew. Way too many to list here."

Thankful

Beachcomber Publisher (among other things) Charles Morgan III welcomes David and Donna from Greenwell Springs, Louisiana to the annual Harbor Docks Thanksgiving Feast in Destin.

According to Eddie Morgan, over 2,000 dinners were served at this year's Harbor Docks Thanksgiving Feast (and at least one cocktail when Beachcomber Editor Chris Manson stopped in). Even better—the event raised over $23,000 for Destin Harvest and Habitat for Humanity. Well done, Beachcomberland!

"We are fortunate to be able to hold our Thanksgiving event every year," says Charles Morgan III, who greeted folks at the door. "We are fortunate to have wonderful workers who work tirelessly year after year when they could be doing anything else.

"We are fortunate to have great volunteers who could spend the day on a couch watching football. We are fortunate to have a restaurant that has been successful for 37 years.

"We've made a decent living selling food for a profit over all these years. Giving away food one day a year is not a big deal. Our Thanksgiving is simple, but it's also powerful."

Share Joy This Christmas

By Steven A. Davies

It is time to say, “Merry Christmas” and to share joy. Yet as I look into the faces of people both near and far, it seems as though joy is in short supply. What many look at as being a wonderful time of the year is for many others a time of gloom. The world in which we live is one filled with problems, anxiety, frustration and angst.

The reality so many fail to realize is that the God of all creation is among us. The prophet Zephaniah of the Old Testament said this:

The Lord your God is in your midst, a mighty one who will save; he will rejoice over you with gladness; he will quiet you by his love; he will exult over you with loud singing.

- Zephaniah 3:17 (ESV)

You may wonder if God cares about you, notices you or is aware of you. The prophet wrote that God cares, takes notice and is intimately aware of you. The declaration that the Lord God is in your midst tells us of His closeness to humanity. Whether it is the face of the super moon in the sky or an infant, we can see the hand of God. And in the darkest moments of life and on life’s mountaintops, we can know He is near.

God takes notice of us and cares for us. The prophet said He rejoices over us! That is a powerful promise in fulfillment. I remember when my children played high school sports and while watching them play, I was so interested in them and their performance. As a father, there is nothing like hearing your child’s name being announced over the speaker system for a great play.

God is our Father, and He rejoices with unlimited intensity. He rejoices over you! Whether in life as we are making the great play or when we have fallen, He rejoices over us.

plan and purpose for us, and it is to know and love Him. And as I know and love Him, I become the recipient of His quieting peace.

You are loved by God. Never forget that truth. He has an amazing plan for your life. Get to know Him and then love Him. Then that wonderful promise of God who is the Father who cares for you, takes notice of you, and is intimately aware of you comes to fruition as you realize He is exulting (rejoicing) over you with loud singing.

At Christmas we celebrate once again know that God has come near and He continues to be in our midst. So allow me to tell you, “Merry Christmas,” and encourage you to share joy.

Christmas in Beachcomberland

By Paula Hilton

Christmas is such a special time. Something about all the lights and blow-up snowmen just tickle my fancy. And for me, it's even more special because I live in beautiful Beachcomberland surrounded by family. My parents, my sister and her family, and my adult children and their families all live just minutes away. And because of that, Christmas in particular is full of family traditions that we simply can't do without. The Christmas Video is a great example of this.

It started back in the early '80s with the advent of the home video camera. Videocassettes cost $25 each back then, and the new system we purchased and lugged from the West Coast to the East Coast for Christmas cost a whopping $3,000. The thing was enormous, about the size of a Volkswagen, but we were thrilled to be able to Video Tape Our Every Movement.

That year I decided to write and film a video entitled What Shall We Get Mom and Dad for Christmas? which we decided we would film secretly and surprise them with on Christmas day.

The story was simple. My sister, her husband, my (then) husband and I would sit on the couch with the camera rolling as we discussed what we should get our parents for Christmas, suggesting impractical, outrageous gifts that represented our own interests and would be quickly dismissed.

All scenes were shot while my sister and I munched non-stop on various fattening and delicious holiday food while our svelte husbands looked on in disgust. Finally, at the end of the film, we cleverly turned the camera off, slipped a wrapped box into view, and then turned the camera back on, making it look like the box had magically appeared.

It was filmmaking at its finest, and comedy right on par with Saturday Night Live. And it was the start of a tradition. Every Christmas since, my parents wait eagerly for the "secret" Christmas video.

Our early attempts were pretty archaic, with mostly ridiculous stories, bad acting and tons of good intentions that somehow missed the mark. But as technology has evolved, so have our movies. Now I can take clips from family members anywhere and include them in the final project. I can grab them from social media, text messages, email or the cloud. I can add effects, voiceovers, music and still pictures, and edit to my heart's content, creating entertaining and unforgettable illusions.

And the beauty of living in Beachcomberland is we can shoot just about anywhere. We aren't confined to staying inside because of nasty, cold weather or a lack of suitable locations. Our area is bustling with beautiful and fun places to stage our scenes. We commandeered a miniature golf course one year. We filmed outside in a number of colorful shopping center parking lots. We've been in our front yards, back yards, streets, parks and beaches. One year, we filmed the entire thing on my sister's 40-foot pontoon.

And you want to talk about helpful, friendly people? We've had complete strangers offer to film so we can all be in the shot, stand in the background to give the illusion of a crowd, and help out with cat calls from the sidelines. The weather and accommodating residents in our area just can't be beat.

So, what's on the agenda for this year? It's going to be a reality show where all 20 family members trek across the Emerald Coast looking for the perfect gift for my parents. At the end, they figure out they had the perfect gift all along...

If Trump cares about the country, he'll swallow his pride and choose Romney, who was an outspoken critic of Trump during the campaign. But that Trump ego is fragile, so he may dismiss concerns about the country and go with Giuliani, the unhinged toady.

Those three items are just a few of the things Trump doesn't want you to focus on, and that's why he took to Twitter on Sunday and tweeted a lie that would easily irritate people who think it's important to discern between truth and absurdity.

There is reason to be irritated—and maybe even terrified—by the soon-to-be president of the most powerful country in the world sharing false information that draws the legitimacy of our electoral process into question. But, sadly, that's the least of our concerns.

It's just a fire lit to hypnotize us, set by an arsonist who knows how to burn a narrative to the ground.
